Venue : Indore institute of Law
Resource Person : Mr. Harsh Deshmukh
No. of Students Participated : 120

Indore institute of Law organised guest lecture with the association of ignited mind club on the differentiation between AI art and Intellectual Property Rights (IPR) presents a nuanced perspective that requires careful consideration of legal frameworks and the evolving nature of artificial intelligence. AI-generated art poses unique challenges in terms of authorship, ownership, and protection under existing intellectual property laws. From an Indian law prospects, copyright law typically grants protection to the creators of original works. However, when it comes to AI-generated art, determining authorship becomes complex. Indian copyright law attributes authorship to human creators, raising questions about the eligibility of AI systems for copyright protection. The absence of explicit provisions addressing AI-generated works necessitates a thoughtful examination of legal principles to adapt to technological advancements.

The job of a Judge comes with great responsibilities and can be highly demanding. Also known as the “custodian of the constitution”, a Judge is someone who is in a place of authority in courtroom proceedings. The powers and responsibilities of a judge vary across different jurisdictions. Each case brought in front of a judge has numerous values, emotions, and stakes attached to it.

Acquiring the power and position to strike that gavel requires certain requisites. Educational qualifications and experience are not enough to become a Judge. Owing to the sensitivity of cases and intricacies involved in jurisprudence, the role of a judge is highly critical. NATIONAL LAW INSTITUTE UNIVERSITY BHOPAL (NLIU)

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING

The National Law Institute University (NLIU), Bhopal, was established by the Rashtriya Vidhi Sansthan Vishwavidyalaya Adhiniyam (Act No. 41 of 1997) enacted by the Madhya Pradesh State Legislature, recently substituted by the Madhya Pradesh National Law Institute University Act, 2018 (Act No. 6 of 2018), has been a leading law school in the country imparting legal education and promoting research and publication. The NLIU is recognised by the University Grants Commission and the Bar Council of India.

The National Law Institute University, Bhopal which expression shall unless repugnant to the context include its successors, representatives and permitted assigns OF THE FIRST PARTY.

This is a place, where staff and faculties are committed to bringing out the best in all of the students, while offering the best of law education. Our aim is to offer an environment where students get the finest opportunities to learn, grasp, and understand the methodology of the law and its working. Since our inception, we have a long record of academic excellence and have always offered an innovative learning approach to our students where they have constantly grown towards their success. We work on the principal to offer an imparting education system and endeavor this by offering a high standard of education and excellence. All this has made us rank as one of the most recognized colleges in India that offers a relaxed and flexible learning environment to its students that allow them to grow and foster a thriving career.

Indore Institute of Law, Indore (IIL), which expression shall unless repugnant to the context include its successors, representatives and permitted assigns OF THE SECOND PARTY.

(The National Law Institute University, Bhopal and IIL are hereinafter collectively referred to as "Parties" and individually as "The First Party" and "The Second Party" respectively.)

A. Background

WHO estimates that mental, neurological and substance use disorders make up 10% of the global burden of disease. Around 1 in 5 of the world's children and adolescents have a mental disorder. Depression is one of the leading causes of disability, affecting 264 million people in the world. Moreover, almost 0.8 million people die by suicide every year in the world, and globally, suicide is the second leading cause of death among individuals aged 15-29 years.

Nearly 7.5% of the Indian population suffers from some form of mental disorder. India accounts for 15% of the global mental, neurological and substance abuse disorder burden. Moreover, persons with mental disorders are also known to be associated with a wide range of social and societal problems, if their illness is unrecognized or is inappropriately managed. An even more troubling fact is that there is an extreme shortage of mental health workers like psychologists, psychiatrists, and trained nurses in India. For example, there are only 3 psychiatrists per million people in India, while the corresponding figures for the USA and China are 105 and 22 psychiatrists, respectively. A huge majority of mental health professionals are located in urban areas. Hence, the shortage of trained mental health specialists in rural India is more severe.

The experience during the pandemic has also reinforced the need to focus on digital technologies, capacity building of frontline health professionals, as well as researchers and clinicians, and to focus on the health needs of marginalized populations. Resilient health systems which are focused on comprehensive health care provision along the life cycle should be a priority. Working across the life spectrum from perinatal mental health, to child/school mental health, youth mental health, adult mental health, geriatric mental health, and highlighting attention towards public health priorities should be an area of focus.

Research, advocacy, development of policy recommendations, and supportive legal frameworks and advancements can play a crucial enabler role in enabling the country and states to better respond to priority health needs.

5. NLIU will establish a mechanism for resource sharing of the reading/training materials at library and online with IIL.
6. NLIU will engage with mental health experts and collaborators at IIL for designing courses or delivering lectures to the students on selected and specialized topics.
7. NLIU with IIL will explore the opportunities for collaborating with other stakeholders and individuals working in the domain of law, policy and mental health after mutual understanding.

The resource sharing of the reading/training materials at library can also be accessed mutually among the parties.

E-THESES

Shodhganga: a reservoir of Indian Theses The UGC Notification (Minimum Standards & Procedure for Award of M.Phil. / Ph.D Degree, Regulation, 2016) dated 5th May 2016 mandates submission of electronic version of theses and dissertations by the researchers in universities with an aim to facilitate open access to Indian theses and dissertations to the academic community world-wide. Online availability of electronic theses through centrally-maintained digital repositories, not only ensure easy access and archiving of Indian doctoral theses but will also help in raising the standard and quality of research. This would overcome serious problem of duplication of research and poor quality resulting from the "poor visibility" and the "unseen" factor in research output. As per the Regulation, the responsibility of hosting, maintaining and making the digital repository of Indian Electronic Theses and Dissertation (called "Shodhganga"), accessible to all institutions and universities, is assigned to the INFLIBNET Centre. <https://shodhganga.inflibnet.ac.in/>

RESEARCH

OBJECTIVES:

The objective of the research paper is to define the power USA judiciary got and its role.

RESEARCH

ABSTRACT

The paper aims to show the importance of judiciary in USA as being a superpower so many countries has eye on USA and how it works in United States of America.

INTRODUCTON

The judiciary is different from the executive and legislatives. Power and working is different from the legislative and the executive. Judiciary has a great power and plays an important role in USA. Power of judiciary is unalienable.

Judicial Power:

Constitution of USA provides some power to the judiciary, such as:

Section 1: The judicial Power of the United States, shall be vested in one Supreme Court, and in such inferior Courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The Judges, both of the supreme and inferior Courts, shall hold their Offices during good behavior, and shall, at stated Times, receive for their Services, a Compensation, which shall not be diminished during their Continuance in Office.

Characteristics and Attributes of Judicial Power

The definition to the judicial power was given by so many justice, philosopher in their cases and in books respectively. Some of the very famous definition are as:

“Judicial power is the power of a court to decide and pronounce a judgment and carry it into effect between persons and parties who bring a case before it for decision.” Justice Samuel Miller, on the constitution¹.

It is “the right to determine actual controversies arising between diverse litigants, duly instituted in courts of proper jurisdiction².”

Jurisdiction and judicial power:

The terms “judicial power” and “jurisdiction” are frequently used interchangeably:

RESEARCH

Jurisdiction: The word jurisdiction is defined as the power to hear and determine the subject matter in controversy between parties to a suit³ or as the “power to entertain the suit, consider the merits and render a binding decision thereon.”⁴The cases and commentary however, support, indeed require, a distinction between the two concepts.

Jurisdiction is the authority of a court to exercise judicial power in a specific case and is, of course, a prerequisite to the exercise of judicial power, which is the totality of powers a court exercises when it assumes jurisdiction and hears and decides a case⁵. Judicial power confers on federal courts the power to decide a case and to render a judgment that conclusively resolves a case. Included within the general judicial power are the ancillary powers of courts to punish for contempt of their authority⁶, to issue writs in aid of jurisdiction when authorized by statute⁷, to make rules governing their process in the absence of statutory authorizations or prohibitions⁸, to order their own process so as to prevent abuse, oppression, and injustice, and to protect their own jurisdiction and officers in the protection of property in custody of law⁹, to appoint masters in chancery, referees, auditors, and other investigators¹⁰, and to admit and disbar attorneys¹¹

Judicial power: is the authority to render dispositive judgments, Congress violates the separation of powers when it purports to alter final judgments of Article III courts¹². Once such instance arose

¹² Plaut v. Spendthrift Farm, Inc., 514 U.S. 211, 218–19 (1995). The Court was careful to delineate the difference between attempting to alter a final judgment, one rendered by a court and either not appealed or affirmed on appeal, and legislatively amending a statute so as to change the law as it existed at the time a court issued a decision that was on appeal or otherwise still alive at the time a federal court reviewed the determination below. A court must apply the law as revised when it considers the prior interpretation. Id. at 226–27. Article III creates or authorizes Congress to create not a collection of unconnected courts, but a judicial department composed of “inferior courts” and “one Supreme Court.” “Within that hierarchy, the decision of an inferior court is not (unless the time for appeal has expired) the final word of the department as a whole.” Id. at 227 when the Court unexpectedly recognized a statute of limitations for certain securities actions that was shorter than what had been recognized in many jurisdictions, resulting in the dismissal of several suits, which then become final because they were not appealed. Congress subsequently enacted a statute that, though not changing the limitations period prospectively, retroactively extended the time for suits that had been dismissed and provided for the reopening of these final judgments.

In *Plaut v. Spendthrift Farm, Inc.*¹³ the Court invalidated the statute, holding it impermissible for Congress to disturb a final judgment. “Having achieved finality, a judicial decision becomes the last word of the judicial department with regard to a particular case or controversy, and Congress may not declare by retroactive legislation that the law applicable to that very case was something other than what the courts said it was.”¹⁴

In *Miller v. French*¹⁵, by contrast, the Court ruled that the Prison Litigation Reform Act’s automatic stay of ongoing injunctions remedying violations of prisoners’ rights did not amount to an unconstitutional legislative revision of a final judgment. Rather, the automatic stay merely altered “the prospective effect” of injunctions, and it is well established that such prospective relief “remains subject to alteration due to changes in the underlying law.”¹⁶

Whereas all the judicial power of the United States is vested in the Supreme Court and the inferior federal courts created by Congress, neither has ever been vested with all the jurisdiction which could be granted and, Justice Story to the contrary¹⁷, the Constitution has not been read to require that Congress confer the entire jurisdiction it might. Thus, except for the original jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, which flows directly from the Constitution, two prerequisites to jurisdiction must be present: first, the Constitution must have given the courts the capacity to receive it, and, second, an act of Congress must have conferred it. The fact that federal courts are of limited jurisdiction means that litigants in them must affirmatively establish that jurisdiction exists and may not confer nonexistent jurisdiction by consent or conduct.

The judicial breach.

Article III of the Constitution, which establishes the Judicial Branch, leaves Congress significant discretion to determine the shape and structure of the federal judiciary. Even the number of Supreme Court Justices is left to Congress — at times there have been as few as six, while the current number (nine, with one Chief Justice and eight Associate Justices) has only been in place since 1869. The Constitution also grants Congress the power to establish courts inferior to the Supreme Court, and to that end Congress has established the United States district courts, which try most federal cases, and 13 United States courts of appeals, which review appealed district court cases.

Federal judges can only be removed through impeachment by the House of Representatives and conviction in the Senate. Judges and justices serve no fixed term — they serve until their death, retirement, or conviction by the Senate. By design, this insulates them from the temporary passions of the public, and allows them to apply the law with only justice in mind, and not electoral or political concerns.

Generally, Congress determines the jurisdiction of the federal courts. In some cases, however — such as in the example of a dispute between two or more U.S. states — the Constitution grants the Supreme Court original jurisdiction, an authority that cannot be stripped by Congress.

The courts only try actual cases and controversies — a party must show that it has been harmed in order to bring suit in court. This means that the courts do not issue advisory opinions on the constitutionality of laws or the legality of actions if the ruling would have no practical effect. Cases brought before the judiciary typically proceed from district court to appellate court and may even end at the Supreme Court, although the Supreme Court hears comparatively few cases each year.

Federal courts enjoy the sole power to interpret the law, determine the constitutionality of the law, and apply it to individual cases.

RESEARCH

The courts, like Congress, can compel the production of evidence and testimony through the use of a subpoena. The inferior courts are constrained by the decisions of the Supreme Court — once the Supreme Court interprets a law, inferior courts must apply the Supreme Court's interpretation to the facts of a particular case.

The Supreme Court of the United States

The Supreme Court of the United States is the highest court in the land and the only part of the federal judiciary specifically required by the Constitution.

The Constitution does not stipulate the number of Supreme Court Justices; the number is set instead by Congress. There have been as few as six, but since 1869 there have been nine Justices, including one Chief Justice. All Justices are nominated by the President, confirmed by the Senate, and hold their offices under life tenure. Since Justices do not have to run or campaign for re-election, they are thought to be insulated from political pressure when deciding cases. Justices may remain in office until they resign, pass away, or are impeached and convicted by Congress.

The Court's caseload is almost entirely appellate in nature, and the Court's decisions cannot be appealed to any authority, as it is the final judicial arbiter in the United States on matters of federal law. However, the Court may consider appeals from the highest state courts or from federal appellate courts. The Court also has original jurisdiction in cases involving ambassadors and other diplomats, and in cases between states.

Although the Supreme Court may hear an appeal on any question of law provided it has jurisdiction, it usually does not hold trials. Instead, the Court's task is to interpret the meaning of a law, to decide whether a law is relevant to a particular set of facts, or to rule on how a law should be applied. Lower courts are obligated to follow the precedent set by the Supreme Court when rendering decisions.

In almost all instances, the Supreme Court does not hear appeals as a matter of right; instead, parties must petition the Court for a writ of certiorari. It is the Court's custom and practice to "grant cert" if four of the nine Justices decide that they should hear the case. Of the approximately 7,500 requests for certiorari filed each year, the Court usually grants cert to fewer than 150. These are typically cases that the Court considers sufficiently important to require their review; a common example is the occasion when two or more of the federal courts of appeals have ruled differently on the same question of federal law.

If the Court grants certiorari, Justices accept legal briefs from the parties to the case, as well as from amicus curiae, or “friends of the court.” These can include industry trade groups, academics, or even the U.S. government itself. Before issuing a ruling, the Supreme Court usually hears oral arguments, where the various parties to the suit present their arguments and the Justices ask those questions. If the case involves the federal government, the Solicitor General of the United States presents arguments on behalf of the United States. The Justices then hold private conferences, make their decision, and (often after a period of several months) issue the Court’s opinion, along with any dissenting arguments that may have been written.

The judicial power

Article III of the Constitution of the United States:

Guarantees that every person accused of wrongdoing has the right to a fair trial before a competent judge and a jury of one’s peers.

The Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth Amendments to the Constitution provide additional protections for those accused of a crime. These include:

- A guarantee that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without the due process of law.
- Protection against being tried for the same crime twice (double jeopardy).
- The right to a speedy trial by an impartial jury.
- The right to cross-examine witnesses, and to call witnesses to support their case.
- The right to legal representation.
- The right to avoid self-incrimination.
- Protection from excessive bail, excessive fines, and cruel and unusual punishments.

Criminal proceedings can be conducted under either state or federal law, depending on the nature and extent of the crime. A criminal legal procedure typically begins with an arrest by a law enforcement officer. If a grand jury chooses to deliver an indictment, the accused will appear before a judge and be formally charged with a crime, at which time he or she may enter a plea.

RESEARCH

The defendant is given time to review all the evidence in the case and to build a legal argument. Then, the case is brought to trial and decided by a jury. If the defendant is determined to be not guilty of the crime, the charges are dismissed. Otherwise, the judge determines the sentence, which can include prison time, a fine, or even execution.

Civil cases are similar to criminal ones, but instead of arbitrating between the state and a person or organization, they deal with disputes between individuals or organizations. If a party believes that it has been wronged, it can file suit in civil court to attempt to have that wrong remedied through an order to cease and desist, alter behavior, or award monetary damages. After the suit is filed and evidence is gathered and presented by both sides, a trial proceeds as in a criminal case. If the parties involved waive their right to a jury trial, the case can be decided by a judge; otherwise, the case is decided and damages awarded by a jury.

After a criminal or civil case is tried, it may be appealed to a higher court — a federal court of appeals or state appellate court. A litigant who files an appeal, known as an “appellant,” must show that the trial court or administrative agency made a legal error that affected the outcome of the case. An appellate court makes its decision based on the record of the case established by the trial court or agency — it does not receive additional evidence or hear witnesses. It may also review the factual findings of the trial court or agency, but typically may only overturn a trial outcome on factual grounds if the findings were “clearly erroneous.” If a defendant is found not guilty in a criminal proceeding, he or she cannot be retried on the same set of facts.

Federal appeals are decided by panels of three judges. The appellant presents legal arguments to the panel, in a written document called a “brief”. In the brief, the appellant tries to persuade the judges that the trial court made an error, and that the lower decision should be reversed. On the other hand, the party defending against the appeal, known as the “appellee” or “respondent,” tries in its brief to show why the trial court decision was correct, or why any errors made by the trial court are not significant enough to affect the outcome of the case.

The court of appeals usually has the final word in the case, unless it sends the case back to the trial court for additional proceedings. In some cases the decision may be reviewed en banc — that is, by a larger group of judges of the court of appeals for the circuit.

RESEARCH

A litigant who loses in a federal court of appeals, or in the highest court of a state, may file a petition for a “writ of certiorari,” which is a document asking the Supreme Court to review the case. The Supreme Court, however, is not obligated to grant review. The Court typically will agree to hear a case only when it involves a new and important legal principle, or when two or more federal appellate courts have interpreted a law differently. (There are also special circumstances in which the Supreme Court is required by law to hear an appeal.) When the Supreme Court hears a case, the parties are required to file written briefs and the Court may hear oral argument.

CONCLUSION

Judiciary an important role in USA as it can easily cancel the proposals given even the proposals by the president as well. Judicial power in USA is vast and very strong.

Yoga Hall & Convention Knowledge Centre

The institute lays due emphasis not only on the academic growth of its students, but also on their holistic development. The present day life style calls for Yoga & Meditation to be an integral part of life and these should be placed indeed on the upper pedestal for overall development of students. The art of practising yoga helps in controlling an individual's mind, body and soul. It balances the physical, mental and spiritual levels for a healthy body and a peaceful mind and helps manage stress and anxiety. It also increases flexibility in the body. Keeping these benefits of practising yoga in mind, the institute has allocated a spacious Yoga hall, where students, faculty and staff can practice yoga and meditation. Additionally, Instructors and trainers are available to train the students.

The Convention Knowledge Center is a proactive initiative of the institute that aims to develop a knowledge based approach among students. The education center at IIL aims at covering the syllabi and learning for examinations and degrees, while the knowledge center aims at uncovering and discovering oneself and learning for knowledge of inner-self. Here, religious scriptures and holy books of Vedas, Upanishads, Gita, Quran, Hadiths and Bible are kept for reading purpose with a view to develop respect for religious diversity and promote connectedness.

“Orphans are the only ones who get to choose their fathers, and they love them twice as much.”

- Adam Johnson, The Orphan Master's Son

In our country there is significant difference in the lifestyle of the upper, middle and lower classes. The children born to these poverty stricken homes often do not have a decent chance at life with no opportunity of education or growth. We live in a free country and yet these children cannot freely choose or even afford the basic necessities of life.

Looking into this thought an educational drive SISHUBODHANAWas conducted at Bahu-Udashya Orphanage by Indore Institute of Law on 13.02.2023, 85 students attended the camp. Student enthusiastically participated in activity. They taught students with great interest and also distributed stationery among the children. This activity was performed to make student more sensitized and aware them about their responsibilities towards the society. The team spent an about three hours with the children before saying goodbye to them. It was indeed very satisfying experience for students, as they could bring smiles on
