ABOUT INDORE

Indore is a city located in west-central India, approximately 200 kilometres west of Bhopal, with a population of around 3 million residents in its greater metropolitan area. The city is characterized by its industrial and cosmopolitan nature, often drawing comparisons to Mumbai, which has led to its designation as "Mini-Mumbai." Indore serves as a melting pot of various ethnic groups, including Marathi, Gujarati, Marwari, Muslim, and Sindhi communities.

The city has established itself as a prominent educational hub, housing esteemed institutions such as the Indian Institute of Management (IIM) and the Indian Institute of Technology (IIT), both highly regarded in the fields of management and technology in India. Indore's early development can be attributed to trade and commerce, which remain significant aspects of its economy.

Indore is also renowned for its historical landmarks, including the 7-story Rajwada Palace and Lal Baag Palace, which date back to the 19th century during the Holkar Dynasty. The legacy of the Holkar rulers is commemorated by a collection of tombs and cenotaphs at ChhatraBaag. The city's night market, Sarafa Bazaar, is famous for its vibrant street food scene.
